ENBE Ltd is frequently called upon to provide expert assistance to projects. This can be at various stages of a project from its inception to post construction. Often, our clients come to ENBE because we are independent of any previous or allied interests in the project, and can therefore provide an impartial expert opinion on the matter in hand.

Broadly speaking, this technical assistance falls into three main areas of work: (i) design review; (ii) due diligence; and (iii) expert advice (e.g. insurance/legal issues).

Design review example:

ENBE acted as technical expert to the appointed loss adjustor CLI who, together with accountants QDLG, formed the adjustment team working on behalf of the Insurers. In line with other similar commissions, the project required a thorough review of all elements of the design and the construction methodology. A second important aspect was the analysis of wave data to ascertain the severity of the conditions that were attributed to the damage, and the interpretation of this in respect of conditions and exclusions applying to the insurance.

The design review was presented in a series of reports, with additional advice provided as required. ENBE also assisted CLI with site visits, meetings, presentations and other communication relating to coastal and marine technical matters leading to resolution of the claim.
